HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

The Washington D.C. Temple was the first temple built east of the Mississippi River since the Nauvoo Temple more than a century earlier. Most of the major Church history sites—including Palmyra, Kirtland and Nauvoo—are within the original boundaries of the Washington D.C. Temple district.

The groundbreaking for the original Washington D.C. Temple was held in 1968 and construction began in 1971. It was dedicated in 1974 by President Spencer W. Kimball and became the 16th operating temple of the Church.

At the time of the temple's dedication, the Washington D.C. Temple district included about 300,000 people living in the eastern United States, eastern Canada and the Caribbean. Church members in South America were also assigned to the Washington D.C. Temple. About 20,000 church members lived in the Washington, D.C., area. Many of these members were converts, which reflected the growth of the Church in the twentieth century. More than 750,000 people toured the temple during the open house in 1974, including many national government leaders.

EXTERIOR FEATURES

BUILDING AND SPIRES: The temple's clean, vertical lines extend skyward, creating a sense of simplicity and design that honors and enhances its original architecture. The existing concrete structure features an exterior clad of Alabama white marble quarried in Sylacauga, Alabama. The six gold spires atop the structure make this temple the tallest in the Church.

EXTERIOR ART GLASS: A solid blaze of color lights the exterior art glass from the ground to the top of the temple. The colors begin with rich, vibrant shades of red and orange and ascend into clear tones of blue, violet and finally white. The glass was designed by Willet Hauser Architectural Glass of Winona, Minnesota.

LANDSCAPING: Ruppert Landscape of Laytonsville, Maryland, was responsible for the landscaping at the temple. The manicured grounds feature 260 trees, 5,073 shrubs and 3,911 perennials, each chosen to complement native plants in the surrounding area. Annuals and green lawns cover 64,822 square feet of the site, enhancing the beauty of the naturally wooded site.

FOUNTAINS: There are two fountains on the temple grounds, both designed by Loci, CRSA and Water Design, all located in the Salt Lake City area in Utah. The main water feature, which is surrounded by a seat wall for guests, is complete with a light aggregate cap, based on the fountain’s original design. The Visitors’ Center water feature, made of a dark granite, creates a clear reflective surface that captures different angles of the temple in photographs.

FENCE AND WALKWAYS: The changes to the perimeter fence are limited to the vehicular entrance where the existing guard house was removed. New fence panels match the existing fence. The new site design encourages more use of the sidewalks surrounding the temple.

INTERIOR FEATURES

FLOORING: White marble, quarried in Sylacauga, Alabama, and fabricated in Xaimen, China, is used for flooring and base throughout the temple. An arched motif adorns the celestial and sealing rooms’ carpet carvings and was carved by Halfmoon Studio in Midvale, Utah. A custom cherry blossom motif decorates the carpet in the bride’s room and was designed by Rugs International of Cartersville, Georgia, who also fabricated the blue and brown geometric-patterned wool area rugs found throughout the temple. Neutral colors are used in the main and stair tower areas of the temple. The carpet in the celestial and sealing rooms was fabricated by Bentley Mills of Los Angeles, California.

DECORATIVE PAINTING: Gold leaf adorns the decorative line work on the walls of the celestial and sealing rooms, designed and installed by Finessed Finishes of Springville, Utah. Light blue and green decorative lines are found on the walls of the lobbies of each floor and in the bride’s room. Characteristic pointed arches are seen throughout the temple and have been added to the ceilings in gold leaf in the sealing rooms as well as the oval opening in the celestial room.

INTERIOR ART GLASS: Improved lighting illuminates the original art glass representation of the Tree of Life just behind the reception desk. The art glass was designed and fabricated by Willett Hauser Architectural Glass of Winona, Minnesota. The new LED lighting makes the brilliant colors of the art glass visible to all who enter the temple.

LIGHTING: The main lighting fixtures are made of beveled cut glass with a frosted base, creating beautiful designs on the ceilings where they are hung. Swarovski crystal chandeliers made in Austria, patterned after the angular geometry of the temple itself, hang in the celestial and sealing rooms. All lighting was designed in partnership with CRSA and Ciana Decorative Lighting, located in Heber City, Utah, and was installed by Altimate Electric Inc. of Mt. Airy, Maryland.

MILLWORK: Quarter sawn Anegre wood creates an understated linear pattern similar to the temple’s exterior architecture. It was fabricated in Tijuana, Mexico, and installed by Masterpiece Millwork and Door of Lindon, Utah.

STAIR AND FONT RAILINGS: Decorative metal railings have been replaced throughout the temple, honoring the original design. White painted overlapping arch balusters and satin brass rails found in the baptistry were fabricated and installed by Hercules Custom Iron, headquartered in Walkersville, Maryland.

DOORS AND HARDWARE: The original exterior decorative bronze doors are unique to this temple and have been restored. Eight bronze medallions by Latter-day Saint sculptor Franz Johansen portray the Big Dipper and North Star, the earth, the planets, the moon, the stars, the concentric circles representing eternity, the traditional temple sun face and seven concentric pentagons representing the seven dispensations. These medallions are also found on the sliding gates at the main entry. Escutcheons featuring a stylized three-dimensional casting of the temple towers are found on the interior doors. The interior doors and hardware are made of wood and brass.

WALLS: Most wall coverings in the temple are made of vinyl, except for the sealing room, which is made from silk fabric that is attached to a paper backing. This specialty wall covering in the sealing room is fabricated by Weitzner and installed by Sparkle Painting of Franconia, Virginia. The design is a type of stylized arch that references the original arch motif that exists throughout the temple. C.J. Coakley Co., Inc. of Fairfax, Virginia, completed all the framing, drywall and plaster work in the building.

EARLY CHURCH HISTORY: The story of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Washington D.C. is the story of gathering, growth, and commitment to public service. In 1839, Church founder and President Joseph Smith and Judge Elias Higbee came to Washington on behalf of persecuted Church members in Missouri. Ultimately the Church was forced to flee to Utah to escape continued opposition. After the Territory of Utah was created in 1850, two Church members served as official delegates to Congress in Washington. But it was Statehood for Utah in 1896 that propelled the first wave of elected members of Congress. Most Church trailblazers came in the early 1900s for employment in government and public service and then recruited and mentored others from the West.

The first official Church congregation was a small unit called the Washington Branch, organized in 1920. Church members met in homes and office space until November 5, 1933 when the first meetinghouse was dedicated in the District on 16th Street and Columbia Road. Called the Washington Chapel, it became an area landmark, known for its Utah marble, stained-glass windows, mosaic of Christ, basketball court, and neighborhood organ recitals. The gold statue of the angel Moroni, a Book of Mormon prophet, was removed from the spire when the building was sold in 1977.

CHURCH GROWTH: In 1938 there were five existing church congregations: Washington, Fairview, Baltimore, and two newly created branches Chevy Chase and Arlington. The Greenbelt Branch was created soon after. Two years later, on June 30, 1940, the first stake was formed, the Washington Stake, which is an ecclesiastical unit similar to a diocese. This newly created stake consisted of six congregations stretching from Baltimore to Arlington. Ezra Taft Benson was the first president of the stake, and he later became the 13th President of the Church. After that first stake was created, as congregations expanded, additional stakes were added over time, and now all or part of 24 stakes can trace their origins to the Washington Stake.

The small group of Church members in this area a century ago has burgeoned to around 80,000 in the metropolitan area, and they are as internationally and culturally diverse as the region itself. Over the decades, some were transient, but others stayed and planted deep roots of public service.

COMMUNITY SERVICE: Church members have always emphasized community service and love of neighbor. This was demonstrated most recently during the COVID-19 pandemic when the Church sent truckloads of food from warehouses in Salt Lake City to Washington-area foodbanks and pantries. Other Latter-day Saint initiatives include Day to Serve, JustServe.org, and free family history research assistance at Family History Centers. In partnership with groups such as the Afro-American Historical and Genealogical Society (AAGHS), Church members utilized the Washington D.C. family history center to conduct family history research. Church members have served on the Interfaith Council of Metropolitan Washington (IFC) for 30 years, and the Festival of Lights at the Washington D.C. Temple Visitors’ Center presents nightly musical performances during the Christmas season.

WASHINGTON D.C. TEMPLE: The Washington D.C. Temple, located in Kensington, Maryland, was dedicated by President Spencer W. Kimball November 19–22, 1974. The temple serves more than 120,000 Latter-day Saints in Washington, D.C., Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania. The temple closed March 2018 for extensive repairs and renovations and will be rededicated August 14, 2022.

Core Beliefs and Doctrines

THE NATURE OF GOD A central doctrine of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is a belief in God the Father; His Son, Jesus Christ; and the Holy Ghost. The three comprise the Godhead. They are one in purpose but separate beings.

CHRISTIAN The Church is Christian but is neither Catholic nor Protestant. Rather, it is a restoration of the Church of Jesus Christ as originally established by the Savior.

DIVINE PRIESTHOOD AUTHORITY The Church emphasizes the need for divine authority. As Joseph Smith taught, “A man must be called of God, by prophecy, and by the laying on of hands by those who are in authority, to preach the Gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof” (Articles of Faith 1:5). The authority to act in God’s name is called the priesthood.

PRINCIPLES AND ORDINANCES “The first principles and ordinances of the Gospel are: first, Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; second, Repentance; third, Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; fourth, Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost [or confirmation in the Church]” (Articles of Faith 1:4). Since young children are incapable of sin, they are not baptized until the age of eight, when they begin to be accountable.

CONTINUING REVELATION Divine revelation for the direction of the Church comes from God through the President of the Church. The Presidents of the Church are viewed by Latter-day Saints as prophets in the same sense as Moses, Abraham, and Peter. In addition, parents can receive divine revelation for their families, and individuals are entitled to revelation for their personal lives.

SCRIPTURES The Book of Mormon: Another Testament of Jesus Christ is divinely inspired scripture, as is the Holy Bible. They are used together with other approved scriptures: the Doctrine and Covenants, a compilation of revelations received since the time of the Restoration, and the Pearl of Great Price, a selection from the revelations, translations, and writings of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

PURPOSE OF LIFE Each of us is literally a child of heavenly parents, with whom we lived in a premortal existence. Through God’s divine plan, we come to earth to receive a physical body, gain experience, and prove ourselves worthy to return to God’s presence. Through the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, all will be resurrected, and through His Atonement, all may partake of His love, mercy, and forgiveness. All have the potential to obtain eternal life, conditioned upon obedience to the Savior’s teachings and ordinances.

FAMILY AND MARRIAGE Family relationships are central to the gospel of Jesus Christ. “The Family: A Proclamation to the World,” issued by the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve Apostles in 1995, proclaims that “the divine plan of happiness enables family relationships to be perpetuated beyond the grave. Sacred ordinances and covenants available in holy temples make it possible for individuals to return to the presence of God and for families to be united eternally” (ChurchofJesusChrist.org). That is why the Church builds temples.

MORALITY The Church follows the Savior’s law of strict morality. Faithful Church members observe principles of honesty, integrity, obedience to local laws, chastity outside of marriage, and fidelity within marriage. between a man and a woman. The Church opposes abortion (with few exceptions), pornography, gambling, and same-sex marriage.

HEALTH CODE The Word of Wisdom, a health code revealed to Joseph Smith in 1833, cautions against using tobacco, alcoholic beverages, tea, and coffee and emphasizes the benefits of wise eating habits for physical and spiritual health. The Church interprets the misuse and abuse of all drugs—illegal, legal, prescription, or controlled—as a violation of God’s law.

TITHING AND FAST OFFERINGS The Church embraces the biblical pattern of tithing, which is contributing one-tenth of one’s income. Faithful members also fast for two meals once a month and donate the money they would have spent on those meals, or more, to help the needy. These generous offerings enable the Church to finance construction, education, missionary, welfare, and humanitarian efforts.

MISSIONARY WORK The Church accepts the Savior’s charge to “go . . . into all the world” and share the blessings of the gospel (Mark 16:15). Consequently, the Church has more than 50,000 full-time missionaries serving throughout the world. Most are college-age men and women, but many are retired couples. All have accepted an assignment from Church leaders and serve at their own expense for a year and a half to two years.

CHURCH SERVICE Prophets have taught that “when ye are in the service of your fellow beings ye are only in the service of your God” (Mosiah 2:17). The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints functions with a lay ministry, giving millions worldwide the opportunity to grow by rendering faithful Christian service to others.
THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

The Church teaches that we all lived in a premortal state as children of heavenly parents. Each person comes to earth to gain a physical body and learn through the mortal experience. By obedience to God’s commandments, each of us may return to His presence, where we will live eternally in a family organization.

A distinctive Latter-day Saint teaching is that marriage can be for eternity. Such marriages must be performed in a temple by authority from God, called priesthood. Latter-day Saint temples are not places of regular Sunday worship. They are sacred buildings for family-centered sacraments and ceremonies, or ordinances. For these ordinances to remain in effect, a husband and wife must love and be faithful to each other throughout their marriage and continue to follow a course of Christian service and commitment throughout their lives.

TEMPLES AND FAMILY HISTORY

For millions of people who lived before the time of Christ or during the intervening centuries between the death of the Apostles and the Restoration of Christ’s Church, these ordinances were not available. Even today, millions live and die without ever hearing the name of Jesus Christ or learning and accepting the saving principles and ordinances of the gospel He taught.

 Provision must be made, then, for those who have died without the opportunity to receive those temple ordinances. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints teaches that all saving ordinances are performed on earth on behalf of the dead. Latter-day Saints stand as proxies for their own deceased ancestors in these sacred ceremonies, which include baptism, sealings of husbands and wives, and sealings of parents and children in eternal family units. These ordinances are only binding if willingly accepted by each individual.

Temples are central to Latter-day Saint belief. Members are taught that they have an obligation to trace their family tree and perform temple ordinances for their deceased ancestors.
THE FIRST VISION

One of the most influential events in religious history occurred during the spring of 1820, when two heavenly beings appeared to a young boy named Joseph Smith.

Joseph lived in New York in 1820, when a religious revival was sweeping the region. Confused by the conflicting claims of the various faiths, he went to the Bible for guidance and there found the counsel to "ask of God" (James 1:5). In a wooded grove near the family farm, Joseph knelt to pray for guidance. In answer to his prayer, God, the Eternal Father, and His Son, Jesus Christ, appeared to Joseph and told him to join none of the existing churches. Further, he was instructed that through him, God would restore to earth the Church originally organized by Jesus Christ, with all its truths and priesthood authority. Joseph Smith officially organized The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on April 6, 1830, in Fayette, New York.

THE BOOK OF MORMON: ANOTHER TESTAMENT OF JESUS CHRIST

In September of 1823, a resurrected being named Moroni appeared to Joseph and showed him a religious history of an ancient American civilization engraved on metal plates and buried in the ground. Joseph translated this record into English by the gift and power of God. Named for one of the ancient prophets who compiled it, the Book of Mormon was first published in 1830. Today it is available in more than 110 languages.

The Book of Mormon contains religious writings of civilizations in ancient America between about 2200 BC and AD 420. It includes an eyewitness account of the ministry of Jesus Christ on the American continent following His Resurrection in Jerusalem.

RESTORATION OF PRIESTHOOD AUTHORITY

Apostles and prophets in all ages have had authority from God, called priesthood, to act in His name. The original Twelve Apostles received the priesthood under the hands of the Savior Himself, but with their persecution and passing, that priesthood authority disappeared from the earth. An essential component of the Restoration, therefore, was the reestablishment of this authority. This was accomplished in 1829 when John the Baptist and Peter, James, and John—all resurrected beings—appeared and, placing their hands on the heads of Joseph and his associate Oliver Cowdery, restored this authority to the earth.

GROWTH AND OPPOSITION

Like the ancient Church, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is a missionary church. In the mid-19th century, converts were encouraged to gather with the Saints in America, but these growing groups of immigrants from Europe and the Eastern United States provided fuel for contention.

To escape this escalating turmoil, the Church moved from New York to Ohio, then to Missouri, and later to Illinois. In 1839 the Latter-day Saints established the community of Nauvoo, Illinois. But mounting suspicion and anxiety within neighboring communities fed an atmosphere of extreme agitation and distrust. Some began to call for the Latter-day Saints’ extermination.

At the height of this turmoil, Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum were shot to death by an armed mob in nearby Carthage, Illinois.

BRIGHAM YOUNG AND THE WESTWARD TREK

Mobs attacked Latter-day Saint settlements in the region, burning crops, destroying homes, and threatening to exterminate the people. Church leaders knew another relocation would be necessary. This led to one of the most visionary and significant migrations in American history.
Brigham Young succeeded Joseph Smith as the leader of the Church. In 1846 he led the Latter-day Saints across the frozen Mississippi River into unsettled Iowa territory and eventually on to the remote valley of the Great Salt Lake, 1,000 miles to the west, arriving in July 1847.

During the next 22 years, an estimated 68,000 Latter-day Saints from around the globe flowed into this Great Basin refuge. Most crossed the plains in wagons, but nearly 3,000 walked pulling handcarts.

From the Salt Lake Valley, Brigham Young directed the establishment of more than 350 communities in western America.

INTO THE MODERN ERA When Utah gained statehood on January 4, 1896, Church membership totaled a quarter of a million, mostly in Utah. When Church membership reached a million in 1947—100 years after the desperate exodus from Nauvoo—it was still largely a North American organization. After 1947, however, worldwide growth accelerated.
