The Saratoga Springs Utah Temple is the 179th operating temple of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The temple presents a striking contrast to the surrounding farmland, mountains and Utah Lake. The beauty and uniqueness of the design reflect the calm and inspiration of the surrounding mountains and wetlands as well as the quiet peace that the temple represents.

EXTERIOR FEATURES

BUILDING: The exterior of the temple is eight-inch-thick beige concrete made in Salt Lake County by Forterra. The spire is glass fiber reinforced concrete by Unlimited Design in Salt Lake City. The structure of the building is steel with concrete shear walls and concrete floor slabs. A decorative band that wraps around the exterior of the temple includes a mountain design, and Utah Lake wetlands and snowy egrets are represented on the metal panels. The egret is a logo of Saratoga Springs City.

EXTERIOR ART GLASS: Holdman Studios, with the assistance of the architectural team, designed the art glass and manufactured it at their studio in Lehi, Utah. The art glass references the Arts and Crafts movement and features objects found in nature. The design includes colors and forms of Utah Lake and the Wasatch Mountains in purples, blues, greens and golds.

LANDSCAPING: The landscape architect is MGB+A. The temple site sits on a bluff overlooking Utah Lake and the Wasatch Front. Local plant species were selected for a natural landscape and sustainability. The elevated plaza facing east looks over the valley and is surrounded by evergreens and mountain shrubs.

INTERIOR FEATURES

FLOORING: The flooring is a combination of carpet, area rugs, porcelain tile, ceramic tile, glass tile and stone. The carpet patterns are carved on-site, and the carved patterns were designed by the architectural team and Gregg Johnson of Halfmoon Studio, located in Salt Lake City, Utah. Custom rugs in the bride's room, entry and patron waiting areas were manufactured by Rugs International, headquartered in the United States, and manufactured in Guangdong, China.

The restroom floors have "rug-like" patterns that consist of multiple sizes and shapes of tiles. A custom pattern on the floor in the baptismal font was created by the architectural team and the Church designer. The interior of the font has TREND Mosaic Brillante glass tiles in various colors of blues, whites, creams and purples. The custom pattern of the natural stone floor in the lower font area underneath the oxen was also designed by the architectural team.

DECORATIVE PAINTING: The decorative paint was designed by the architectural team and Church designer, with the assistance of Aaron Allen of Allen's Commercial Arts LLC. Stylized flowers used throughout the temple represent various wildflowers found in the area including the iris, daisy and chrysanthemum. In the baptistry and other areas, stylized lines representing water and waves reference the nearby water in the Wasatch Mountain Range and Utah Lake.

INTERIOR ART GLASS: The interior art glass design includes colors and forms of the natural surroundings near the temple in purples, blues, greens and golds. The art glass on the main level at the baptistry depicts snowy egrets in wetlands and grasses, reflecting the Saratoga Springs City logo. Utah Lake is represented in the wave and water patterns at the bottom of the art glass panels. Stylized gold shapes above the water represent silhouettes of birds, and the stylized mountains represent the Wasatch Mountains.

DECORATIVE LIGHTING: The decorative light fixtures are manufactured and designed through HB Lighting in New York. The bride's room has Schonbek light fixtures manufactured with Swarovski Crystal from Austria.

BAPTISMAL FONT RAILINGS AND GLASS: The font railings were designed by Naylor Wentworth Lund in Salt Lake City, Utah. The font railings are made of antique brass, Sapele African mahogany and glass. The simple linework detail etched around the perimeter of the glass panels was pulled from the decorative paint design.

DOORS AND MILLWORK: The millwork, doors and standard wood for the temple is a Sapele African Mahogany finished by Granite Mill. Some doors have interior art glass incorporated into their design. The style of the millwork is Art Deco.

HARDWARE: The design of the decorative door hardware, manufactured by Luna Bronze in Provo, Utah, replicates architectural detailing found in the temple. The grass/wetland design found in the center portion of the hardware and the water design found at the bottom of the hardware is taken from the art glass.

CEILINGS: The majority of the ceilings are painted gypsum. There are locations that have stepped ceilings to enhance the architecture in the space. Custom ceiling medallions featuring floral and foliage embellishments, manufactured with Allen's Commercial Arts, are found throughout the temple.

ORIGINAL ARTWORK: The temple's original artwork includes "Evening, Distant Mountain," by Brad Aldridge; "Timpanogos from Across the Lake," by Bruce Brainard; "Evening Flight," by Adair Payne; "Timpanogos Sunrise," by Ken Stockton; and "Jordan River Sunrise," by Ken Stockton.

A Brief History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Northwestern Utah County

EARLY SETTLEMENT IN NORTHWESTERN UTAH COUNTY

Northwestern Utah County began effectively as a "bookend settlement." In 1847, after John C. Fremont discovered the Utah Valley, Parley P. Pratt led a party to explore the northwestern shore of Utah Lake as a potential source of fish to supplement pioneer diets. In late July 1850, a party of seven explorers arrived at the site of an ancient American Indian encampment and named it Dry Creek. After exploring the area further, they returned to Salt Lake and reported their findings. The first permanent settlers established themselves south of Dry Creek shortly thereafter.

In October 1852, Alfred Bell, a settler from Lehi, traveled approximately 15 miles southwest of the Lehi area and discovered a beautiful valley with tall grass and plenty of water. Soon after, in November 1852, three families traveled there to start a settlement but were deterred by intermittent skirmishes with local natives. Almost a year later, in September 1853, the settlers were able to return permanently and began to construct a fort. They named the settlement Cedar Fort.

In the early 1850s several settlers arrived about five miles south of Cedar Fort and established a settlement they named Fairfield.

Many years later, the area between Fairfield and Lehi filled in as the city of Eagle Mountain incorporated in December 1996 with 250 residents and the city of Saratoga Springs incorporated in December 1997 with an initial population of 167.

The Saratoga Springs Utah Temple sits on farm ground the Lehi Utah Stake managed as a dry farm beginning in the 1950s. Eventually the Welfare Services department of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints released the Lehi Utah Stake from its farming responsibilities and assumed control of the operation. The land produced wheat, feed corn, and alfalfa hay for use in the Church's welfare efforts.

CHURCH GROWTH

The first ecclesiastical entity in northwestern Utah County was created in 1851, when the Dry Creek Ward was organized and David Evans was called as its first bishop. To the southwest, the Cedar Fort Ward was created on April 3, 1853, and Allen Weeks was called as its first bishop. The Lehi Utah Stake, the first stake in Lehi, was organized on July 1, 1928. The first stake in Eagle Mountain (which included Cedar Fort and Fairfield) was created on February 27, 2000, and the first stake in Saratoga Springs followed shortly thereafter on September 16, 2001. This area is responsible for some of the fastest growth of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in North America. Presently, in northwestern Utah County there are 20 stakes in Lehi, 9 stakes in Saratoga Springs, and 9 stakes in Eagle Mountain. Since 2000, an average of 1.2 stakes per year have been created in the area.

THE COMMUNITY AND CHURCH TODAY

What began as the bookend settlements of Lehi and Cedar Fort in 1851 and 1852 have blossomed into a thriving hive of growth. Eagle Mountain, Cedar Fort and Fairview together boast a population upwards of 50,000. Saratoga Springs has nearly 45,000 residents, and Lehi has more than 75,000 residents.

In his opening remarks during the Sunday morning session of the Church's 187th Annual General Conference on April 2, 2017, President Thomas S. Monson announced the future construction of the Saratoga Springs Utah Temple. The groundbreaking and site dedication occurred Saturday, October 19, 2019.

The public open house will begin Saturday, April 15, 2023, and run until July 8, 2023. President Henry B. Eyring will dedicate the temple on Sunday, August 13, 2023. It is one of 24 temples either operating or under construction in Utah and one in 315 operating, under construction, or announced across the world.
